Dear friends in Christ,

FROM FR. DANIEL

Many are invited, but few are chosen. These words capture very well the wonder of the generous universal invitation to God's kingdom, and the seriousness of our free response.

The Lord does want everyone to save; He calls us to know the truth and live accordingly; He teaches us in many ways and reaches out unceasingly. But He also respects our freedom: in one of the most powerful mysteries of life, the Lord chose to respect our free will, and we can say yes or no to his invitation.

But what about those who said yes to the wedding feast but did not wear a wedding garment? The meaning of this is simple: charity — symbolized by the wedding garment — is necessary for salvation.

It is possible to spend our lives doing good things for the wrong reason, and that would be like going to the feast without the garment of charity.

May the beauty and seriousness of today's Word move us to renew the good intention and the charity needed so we can be not only invited, but finally chosen to share eternal joy with God and all the saints.

United in prayer,
Fr. Daniel
