FROM FR. DANIEL

Dear friends,

We are so close to Christmas that we can't refrain from expressing our joy at this Mass with more flowers, more organ music, and rose vestments. Today's liturgy exudes with joy.

Just as we all like the joy shared this Gaudete Sunday, we should consider another consequence of joy. St. John the Baptist appears again to prepare the path for the Lord. The Gospel of John tells specifically that John came to testify to the light. This leads us to a question: do we testify to the light?

We all enjoy the light of Advent, the sweet expectation for the Lord's coming, the joy of this day. But joy is not something simply to be kept among us: it has to be communicated. Therefore, in a natural way, the joy of this Sunday becomes an invitation to find ways to testify to the light in a world that grows in darkness. Whether when are at home, or working, or shopping, or gathering with friends and family, let's remember this simple truth: we come to testify to the light. We, in some simple way, bring the presence of Jesus. Then, our joy will be complete and our hearts ready for the coming of Christ.

With my prayers,

Fr. Daniel
