PASTOR'S CORNER

Dear friends,

The Lord invites us to consider what really matters in life, and to examine ourselves regarding what we care most about. The main teaching is simple: one's life does not consist of possessions. In life, we possess things, but all we have must be oriented toward our goal, which according to St. Ignatius of Loyola, whose feast day is July 31st, is to praise and serve God and through this, save our souls. His conclusion is powerful: we must use the things that lead us to this end and reject those that might prevent this goal.

To live caring more about things that will pass away is vanity. Rather than losing peace and rest by working ceaselessly for things that don't endure, the Lord invites us today to place our heart in that which lasts, that which we can "take with us" when this life ends. May we respond with simple generosity to the Lord's invitation.

With my prayers,
 Fr. Daniel
